By J. Louis Roberts
Edited by Leonard Barron

The purpose of this book is to interpret step by step the problems of the Dahlia gardener. .Mr. Roberts has been growing Dahlias for over twenty-five years and has written a modern manual for the home gardener that will answer all questions pertaining to Dahlia growing from his point of view. Illustrated by Natalie Harlan Davis. $2.00 plus 10c for postage.

LAKESIDE GARDENS
NEW BALTIMORE, MICH.

. . . FOREWORD . . .

GREETINGS!—Customers and friends, and we do know that all our customers are our friends. We have enjoyed doing business with you the past years, and we hope that there will be a continuance of friendly business during the coming years.

With the constantly increasing number of new dahlias being placed on the market each season, it is becoming increasingly difficult for the amateur to really know what to buy. It is even worse for the older grower, or commercial grower. Each season we buy what we feel is the best of the new introductions only to discover each blooming season, that part of them were not what they were cracked up to be, and certainly nothing in the way of improvement over varieties already on the market. In fact, we have thrown out several yearling seedlings for many seasons, which were better in every way than many new dahlias we have purchased, each season. We also know that this is true of many other growers.

Sometimes this is true because of different soil conditions, or climatic conditions, and a dahlia that will do well for instance in Red Bank, New Jersey, may not do well in Indianapolis, or Minneapolis. However, when we hear from our friends in other parts of the country, and they give us the same report on a certain dahlia, we feel quite sure it was simply a case of where the dahlia was not what it should have been.

We tell you the truth when we say 10 inches, that means in any good ground. We do not say 14 inches, as can be grown, by forcing the life out of your roots; just follow our instructions on Page 23 and you will have good Flowers and Roots.

We are having our new dahlias grown by good growers in several parts of the country, and unless they do well for all of them, we just don't offer them to the public.

The dahlia is growing in popularity with gardeners all over the country. It is the No. 1 flower in popularity today, and is being grown by more people each season. The dahlia, you see, today will not be in the same class with what you will see in 1949. With the millions of seeds planted each season, the better selection of pod parents, the more careful scrutinization being given the new things by the various dahlia societies, and dahlia fans, it is only reasonable to assume that we are going to see better color, better growth, more ease in culture, and bigger dahlias for those who like the big fellows, and smaller and more refined dahlias for the lovers of the little fellows.

There was a great demand for green plants in the past year, the explanation is given in two reasons, one is that people are getting accustomed to green plants, and the second is that it is possible to obtain three plants of one variety or one plant, each of three varieties for the price of one root. Bear in mind, when you buy that a plant produces just as good a clump of tubers and usually better blooms than roots.

We wish you all the best dahlia year you have ever had.

Sincerely,

LAKESIDE DAHLIA GARDENS.

EMESSEE

(Roberts-Lakeside)

This dahlia is an informal decorative of light autumn shade Bright Pink shaded. Golden Orange in color and Robert Ripley in formation. The bloom size is ten inches wide by five inches deep. MINIATURES

SYLVIA

Miniatures are coming to the front as never before. You are passing up one of the real joys and pleasures of growing dahlias when you do not plant some of these miniatures. They make wonderful cut flowers; bloom profusely; are usually fool-proof; take less space in your garden, and if friend wife is not as crazy about dahlias as you are, plant a half-dozen good miniatures this season, and see if she does not at least have patience with you. We have tested every miniature listed here, and can guarantee them to you.

DAHLIA CULTURE

SOIL. Dahlias will grow in any soil provided there are sufficient plant foods in the soil to supply the needs for proper growth. Many soils can be improved to grow better dahlias. A heavy soil or clay soil may be improved by the addition of sand and the use of quantities of rotted manure and peat.

FERTILIZER. Before adding plant foods, have your soil tested to determine deficiencies. Generally, 5 to 10 pounds per 100 square feet of a fertilizer analyzing 4-12-4, or thereabouts, will meet most requirements, if the soil has already had organic material added to it. After the first of August, when the plants are beginning to show flower buds, "feeding" with small amounts of nitrogenous fertilizers, once or twice, will favor the development of larger flowers and more vigorous plants.

DIVISION. Never plant a "clump" of roots. Divide the clump carefully into a number of parts so that each division will have one sound, healthy tuber, and one or two plump buds.

PLANTING. For exhibition flowers, dahlias should be planted at least 3 feet apart each way. Dwarf varieties for bedding and varieties used for landscape effect may be planted closer. Dwarf singles, as Coltness Gem, should be planted 12 to 14 inches apart for best bedding effects. Dig the holes at least 6 inches deep. Place the tuber horizontally in the bottom of the hole with the bud an inch or so from the stake. Cover the roots with about 2 to 3 inches of soil. As the plants grow the hole may be filled in by cultivating.

STAKING. Five to six foot stakes will be required to support tall growing varieties. The stakes should be set in at the time of planting. If you wait until later to drive in the stakes, much damage may be done to the roots of the plants.

PRUNING. Large-flowered types and bedding types should have the tips of the plants cut out when they have reached a height of 8 to 12 inches. Cactus varieties are often permitted to grow until the first buds appear. These are then pinched out to encourage the growth of the laterals. For exhibition flowers, allow only 3 or 4 branches to develop. Remove side buds and all laterals, except those at the bottom, from each of the branches.

WATERING. If "green plants" are planted, water carefully for the first 2 weeks. Through July never allow the soil to dry out sufficiently to cause a checking of the growth. After the first of August and until early or mid-September, dahlias will require plenty of water. If the soil is well drained, there is not much danger of overwatering. Throughout the summer on dry hot days, the plants will be much benefited by a thorough syringing in the late afternoon.

DIGGING. After the first heavy frost, the tops of the plants will blacken and dry. A few days to a week after a frost the tops should be cut off and the clumps dug up. They should be carefully dried off in the sun for several hours before being stored.

STORAGE. Store the tubers in dry granulated peat in a cool place. The best storage temperature is about 45 degrees Fahrenheit. The storage atmosphere should be moist enough to prevent excess drying of the roots and at the same time not so moist as to encourage mold or storage rots.

In the fall when your dahlias are blooming, enter some blooms in the Dahlia Shows near you. You will have lots of pleasure and will learn much about dahlias at the exhibitions.

TERMS

Cash with order. Money orders and checks should be made payable to Nick Koenig.

No C.O.D. Orders unless 50% deposit is made.

Orders will be filled with good healthy divisions with at least one or more eyes showing or strong hardy plants in 3 inch pots.

We do not substitute. We will notify you if unable to supply any variety.

This Catalogue is a Gift...

It is yours with our compliments, and we are happy to make you the owner of a copy. We have spent much time and many hard-earned dollars in photographs, photo engravings, printing, mailing, etc. in an endeavor to give you an attractive and authoritative reference and price list. However, economical business practice makes it necessary to withdraw names from our mailing list of those who have not favored us with an order after the second Catalog has been sent to them.
